

23 A central bank increases interest rates to reduce inflation.

When will this policy be most likely to succeed?

- A When household spending is inelastic in response to interest rate changes.
- B When the country has a floating exchange rate that appreciates.
- C When the government has an increasing budget deficit.
- D When trade unions demand higher wages to protect the living standards of their members.