

- 12 Workers in the secondary sector of an economy earn more on average than workers in the tertiary sector.

Which combination will most likely increase differences in wages between workers in the secondary and tertiary sector of an economy?

	secondary sector	tertiary sector
A	increased productivity	increased supply of workers
B	decreased demand for products	decreased productivity of workers
C	increased supply of workers	increased demand for products
D	weaker bargaining strengths of trade unions	decreased minimum wage